

Varun Soni posted in GOURMET PLANET.

53 minutes ago

I was never a fan of sushi. But had to change my mind and taste when I visited the first Indian outlet of the American chain of Japanese cuisine, Benihana (red flower). Located at Nehru Place metro station, the fine dining eaterie has a personalised ambience (replete with digital images of the life of its owner and chef Rocky Aoki) that is at once welcoming. I had Onion soup, Prawn Tempura, vegetarian sushi with wasabi, teppanyaki calamari and prawns dish and another comprising lamb and chicken. Ended the awesome dinner with a green tea pudding and cheesecake dimsums. A must visit for all those who love Japanese cuisine and want to try something different.

 Like

 Comment